For firms that are incorporated bodies (including companies, incorporated societies, incorporated trusts, or limited partnerships) the declaration must be signed by a director or an executive officer (or equivalent) of the incorporated body.

Where several firms are carrying out the activity together (such as through a joint venture arrangement) the person signing the authorisation must be entitled to sign on behalf of all the firms. (For the avoidance of doubt, if the terms of the joint venture arrangement address authorisation, it will be sufficient that those terms are met in determining who is authorised to sign this declaration.)
